

A dog came into the shelter today
Owner surrender, not even a stray

The dog was hungry and cold
And already about 7 years old

What did he do to deserve all this?
Will all of his love and kisses not be missed?

So many people say "to the shelter I will not go"
Do they not have any idea? Do they just not know?

The blessing they'll get from the life they save
This dog is precious and worth all the person gave

It might be a dog, but it's God's special creature
Giving unconditional love is it's own special feature

You can actually learn a lot from him
The love he shows is bright, never dim

He loves you so much and he knows he was saved
A light on his path you have begun to pave

Don't let him down, he's depending on you
Give him the life he has always deserved, whatever you do

The owner, he didn't give him what he deserved
But with time he'll show you the love he has in reserve

He'll give you more than you've ever dreamed
No matter what, on him you can lean

So, go to the shelter and save a dog on death's door
He'll give you extreme joy and so, so much more!
